WaMu’s failing loans spike

With the economy slowing, WaMu faced a skyrocketing percentage of mortgages that were 90 days past due and classified as “nonaccrual” loans, meaning the bank couldn’t count on collecting all the money. The failure rate for three types of loans:

Source: Company reports

REPORTING BY DREW DESILVER
GRAPHIC BY MARK NOWLIN/THE SEATTLE TIMES